Courtship of Miles Standish Brilliant Feature.

A picture that is creating a profound appression upon everyone who sees it impression upon everyone who sees it is the great historical subject. The Courtship of Miles Standish, now being shown at the Breed theater this week. This is a story familiar to everyone and is portrayed in an accurate manner by some of the most expert exponents of the motion picture art. As nearly as possible every effort has been made to adhere as closely as possible to the lines of the beautiful poem and the many superb scenes on the shore showing the grandeur of the surf call for many expressions of admiration. There is, of course, the pretty romance running through the picture but there is a bit of powerful acting in the Indian council scene, and the picture becomes very spirited at this time, but closes with a gorgeous scene on the shore, showing Standish, alone, and seated on the rocks, watching the sun set. This is especially novel and beautiful, as it shows the sunset in all its magnificence of summer meaning the sun set.

movel and beautiful, as it shows the sunset in all its magnificence of summer splendor.

The very strong Biograph picture, that carries a tremendous moral, is entitled The Last Deal, and represents the follies of gambling and is an exciting story well enacted and photographically perfect.

Mias Welcott sings as her concert song the pretty number of Herbert's entitled Cupid and I, receiving well-merited applause.

NEGLECTED FARMS, Railroad Company Might Assist In Making Them Profitable.

There is a fertile field in this state for the New Haven railroad to follow the plans laid down and now being executed by a large number of railroad companies, for the development of the farming industry of the state, says the Stamford Advocate. For many years the abandoned farms of Connecticut have been a byword, they have been made the subject of the artist's brush and of the amateur photographer's kit, and the railroad company, with its great financial resources, could no doubt, if the plan was undertaken reclaim the soil of these old and now unused farms and make them paying ventures, just as other railroads have undertaken to do end some are now successfully doing. Scarcely a section of the state but can point out, not with pride, of course, many farms where once the soil was prolific in production of corn, potatoes, etc., with good grazing for cattle.

A drive through the state will disclose many such places. Large farm copses, built on what would be called a model design a few years back and not in too poor condition today to be made in for occupancy, stand in ruins room neglect, and the acres of ground bout them produce nothing but weeds and brush. Some, if not all, of this and, could be reclaimed, with the modern wrinkles in farming and the p to date methods followed by the we man who makes his living from the soil. That the railroad will go not the farming business is not known, at other railroads are doing this ork and in their own and the good the territory they serve.

the territory they serve.
Should these farms be reclaimed, the ste would, of course, be the largest neficiary, but the increased product would also benefit the railroad tion would also benefit the railroad company to no small extent.

The New York Central is the latest of the railroads to take up this plan of making over shandoned farms. The plan of this company is to buy up a few farms, which can be done at little expense, provide the money necessary to equi pthem, then put practical men in charge of them. In a short time, it is figured, each farm will be on a paying basis, will be making money for the railroad as a farm and as a shipper over its lines. Then, when in good condition, the farm will be offered for sale, the railroad thus

STATE BAR PRESIDENT George E. Hall of Bridgeport as Capa ble as Modest.

Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, others have greatness thrust upon them. George E. Hall of Bridgeport, who was elected president of the Connecticut Bar association during the past week, belongs to the second and third classes, says the New Haven Register. The achievement began when he entered Yale, continuing during his college course, during his term in the Law school, and up to the present time. But the last stroke of greatness came so suddenly that Mr. Hill, who had withstood the shock of a campaign for the mayoralty of Bridgeport against Denis Mulvihill, was figuratively taken off his feet.

Mr. Hill, one of the most modest men who ever stepped from the Yale campus with the degree of A. B., was greatly surprised at his election to the highest office in the gift of the Connecticut lawyers. At first, when notified, he refused to believe it. Business duties prevented his presence at the meeting, so he was apprized of his honor by telephone.

Mr. Hill has but one handicap, that is his birthplace. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. in 1864, being the third son of Charles E. and Susan F. Hill. His father, who was an importer of teas, retired from business in 1876 and removed to Stamford, Conn.

And runged pine and oak
And falling in the woodland now
To the woodman's sturdy strake;
No more they'll feel the summer bee
Nor hear the wild bees hum;
Their stately heads are in the durb
For wooding time has come!

The cathird hiding is the bush May voice a wailing note of vain regret for olden friends. By ruthless axmen smore; The sly old fox left leng ago, Before his foes were near—Unerringly he seems to know When wooding time is Lere!

The goodman by his cheerful fire Frepares the trusty saw:
Nor cares he if the winter wind Outside be chill and raw.
And when the birds are nere assim The woodpile near his door Will comfort him for days of toil—For wooding time is o'er.

—Michael Fitzgareid.
